Dynamis was founded in 2003 as an engineering company in Brazil. Early on, the company specialized in combustion and industrial processes. However, it did not take long for Dynamis to start developing and supplying its own industrial equipment and become a reference, especially in the main burner market.

The Dynamis name is synonymous with the development of state-of-the-art equipment such as the revolutionary D-Gasifier, the D-Flame Burner, the robust D-Igniter, and the efficient D-HotGas, which allows companies to work with a variety of fuels including biomass, petroleum coke, natural gas, and heavy fuel oil.

Dynamis focuses on innovation, technology and commitment to its customers and has grown rapidly over the last fifteen years since developing the first calcined clay plant at CIPLAN, Brazil.

Thus, the company grew to become an important player with great future prospects in the sector of combustion equipment. These prospects have reached a new level following the agreement reached in September 2021, which integrates Dynamis into the international LOESCHE Group.

Dynamis is excited about the new opportunities this agreement brings. These include helping an even greater number of global customers build better, more efficient plants to help them achieve a more sustainable future.

LOESCHE, a more than 115-year-old company headquartered in Germany with offices worldwide, is also looking forward to working with Dynamis. This is a big step in the direction of seeing globalization as an ever-growing opportunity. The partnership between LOESCHE and Dynamis will bring a better understanding of the specific ways of thinking, feeling, acting and legislating in the different regions of the world. In
